Valutek Releases New Cleanroom Facemask Instructional Video

Valutek video teaches proper way to put on, wear cleanroom facemask

PHOENIX (WiredPRNews) — Cleanroom facemasks are the frontline defense against operator contamination. But facemasks must be placed and worn properly to do their job fighting contamination such as skin flakes, spittle mucous, hair follicles and cosmetics.

As part of Valutek's ongoing effort to educate and provide free tools to the cleanroom industry, the company has published an instructional video on the important role of the facemask in the cleanroom, including how to properly place and wear three common styles of facemasks.

The video can be viewed on multiple sites, to make the information as accessible as possible to cleanroom operators:

Uncomfortable or low-quality facemasks beg to be worn inappropriately, exposing the cleanroom to numerous contaminations (the mouth is an operator's No. 1 contaminant generator). Valutek's facemasks are made of 3-PLY, lightweight and breathable polypropylene, a combination that provides bacterial and particle filtration efficiency greater than 95 percent. All Valutek facemasks are individually inspected for sizing, material and workmanship.
